Michigan has 63 NAWCA projects either completed or underway. These projects have conserved 63,146 acres of wildlife habitat. NAWCA funding of more than $23.5 million stimulated partner contributions of over $66.6 million. These figures do not include multi-state projects.

SAGINAW BAY TO LAKE ERIE COASTAL HABITAT V

This project focuses on wetland and associated upland habitat conservation in the Saginaw Bay area and southward along Michigan's major waterfowl migration corridor through Lake St. Clair and down the Detroit River to the western Lake Erie watershed. It targets Great Lakes coastal marshes and associated shoreline habitats, expansion and restoration of state and federal wildlife areas, and contains a private lands restoration component important for waterfowl production and spring migration. This project focuses conservation efforts on two primary habitats, coastal wetlands and associated uplands. These habitats provide critical migration and important production habitat for waterfowl and many other species of wetland dependent wildlife. High priority waterfowl species including Mallards, American Black Ducks, Greater and Lesser Scaup, Northern Pintails, and Southern James Bay Canada Geese rely heavily on these habitats. Other priority waterfowl species include Wood Ducks, Redheads, Ring-necked Ducks, American Wigeon, and Canvasbacks. The Western Hemisphere Shorebird Reserve Network has designated this area as a Regional Shorebird Reserve. Conservation efforts are vital, as industrial, agricultural, residential, and urban development have greatly reduced coastal wetlands throughout the project area. Activities include fee title and easement acquisitions, restoration, and enhancement.
